Providing Strategic Security Guidance to Protect Your Information & Assets

As part of a comprehensive technology strategy, security has moved to the forefront as organizations of every size face growing threats. Driven by mobile access needs, BYOD, IoT growth, and the rising tide of malware, coupled with governance and compliance requirements, having a seasoned security expert has become a necessity. With the skills shortage for security leadership at an all-time high, companies are increasingly looking to outside experts to set the path forward to alleviate security issues.

NeuEon provides CISO-level advisement to help define a strategic plan that ensures you have strong, up-to-date security policies and procedures that reflect your unique industry and business. From providing guidance on closing existing vulnerabilities, to defining a roadmap for proactively upgrading security measures and technologies, NeuEon can set strategic leadership goals, and provide the understanding of the functional security tasks necessary to achieve a rock-solid security framework.

Security and governance gaps can occur at any time in a company's lifecycle, but is more acute in times of change or for specific industries.

- Fast growing organizations: These organizations frequently need an equal focus on strategic guidance, resource allocation, and management of security-related issues. Defining how to improve and scale security needs, as well as personnel needs to support expansion, are generally high priorities.
- Companies facing merger or acquisition: When organizations are merging or being acquired, it is a critical time for organizational security leadership. Successfully blending the security needs and technologies of different organizations requires a seasoned expert who understands which technologies work well together and has experience integrating systems. The right CISO leadership can guide organizations into an efficient and cost effective, secure security framework, avoiding the disparate silos of information and systems that are expensive and time-consuming to maintain.
- Companies with diverse regulatory needs: Many companies face industry and regulatory requirements for data security. From HIPAA, to SEC/SOX and PCI DSS, we match your organization with an experienced CISO that can provide the strategic guidance necessary to ensure compliance. An experienced CISO-level consultant can ensure that your organization has compliant security, so your organization can avoid financially-crippling fines, or public damage to your brand. We constantly stay on the forefront of existing industry and regulatory guidelines.

Best Practices for Success

Although each engagement is different, NeuEon has cemented methodologies and best practices based on working for decades across industries and organizational types. Typical services may include:

- Assessment

We consult with organization leaders and key stakeholders to assess current strategy, existing security, and on-going strategic business operation initiatives, as well as the corresponding security implications.

- Planning

We work as part of your team to develop information security policies and procedures that incorporate your unique industry and business requirements. We create a technology roadmap and implementation plan using our framework of best practices.

- Implementation and future planning

We provide the strategic guidance to implement your technology roadmap, along with any best practices training. We provide guidance and analysis of security trends, suggest policy updates, and recommend technology upgrades as necessary.
